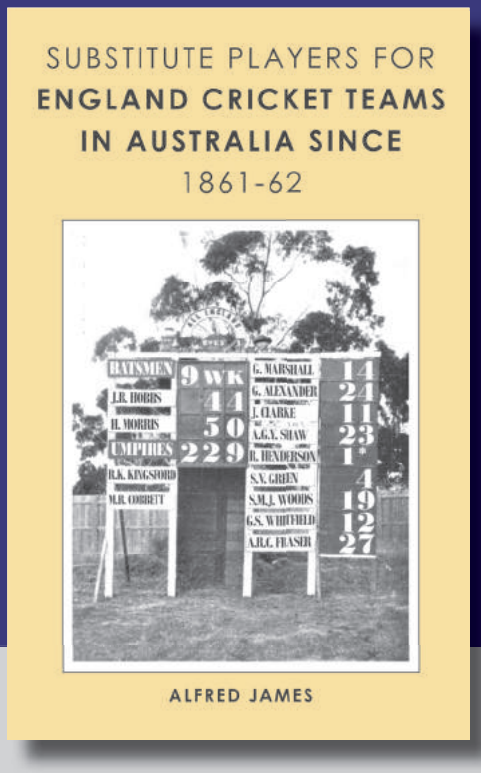
SUBSTITUTE PLAYERS FOR ENGLAND CRICKET TEAMS IN AUSTRALIA SINCE 1861-62

English teams have played very close to 500 first-class matches and 1000 second-class matches (including One-Day International and T20 matches) in Australia since the first tour in 1861-62. The scorecards of these matches record quite a few players who made casual appearances, standing in for regular members of the touring team who were absent because of injury or illness or who were taking a rest. Indeed, many of them were officials in the team or 'camp-followers' who were favoured with a 'guernsey' in an unimportant match.

This monograph attempts to list all the substitute players who have appeared for England in the scorecards of matches played on tours of Australia – that is, all players outside the selected touring party who have appeared in the batting line-up of a match or who have caught a player in the opposing team (none has effected a stumping).

Cost for the limited edition is $120.00 [Plus GST], the trade edition is $60.00 [Plus GST], with postage $5.00.

The limited edition has been signed by Angus Fraser and the author, is bound in half leather, with end bands, and has a marker ribbon along with coloured endpapers.



ALFRED JAMES OAM has long had an interest in minor cricket and has written several books on the subject. These include The 'Don' vs The Rest, the scorecards of 351 minor matches played by Sir Donald Bradman, the Centenary History of the NSW Districts Cricket Association and Sundry Extras, an account of over 200 supplementary or 'fill up' matches played by Australian teams overseas and by teams visiting Australia. His other books include Much Writing, Many Opinions, the centenary history of The Royal Australian Historical Society. Alf has two postgraduate degrees in classics from The University of Sydney where he worked as a senior administrator. He has played senior cricket for exactly 50 years in the Hornsby-Ku-ring-gai and Hills District Cricket Association of which he was president for 23 years.
